Shabbat is a taste of paradise. Talmud, Berachot 57a

Shabbat Evening Services 6:00 pm | Friday

Our Shabbat evening service will embrace you. Fresh and familiar music will enable you to give voice to your own spirit. Special occasions in the lives of our congregants, Jewish teachings, sermons from our rabbis, and special music will enhance "Shabbat—our sanctuary in time."

Torah Study on Shabbat Morning 9:30 am | Saturday

Start your Saturday with Torah study and a bagel with a shmear of cream cheese. Each Shabbat morning before our Shabbat Morning Minyan (10:30 am), you will study Parashat HaShavua, the weekly Torah portion. The rabbis will lead a discussion of ancient commentaries and teachings and reveal the Torah's modern and relevant lessons.

Sacred Connections

Rabbi Gayle Pomerantz

I'm sure it's not surprising that I've always been interested in attending synagogue wherever I have been in the world. In the past, one thing which always struck me, particularly when visiting Europe, was the elaborate security plan around synagogues. Not only is there usually a physical barrier around the premises, there are armed guards, bag checks and metal detectors, and in some cases I have had to register in advance to attend with my passport, as I just did this past June in Germany.

Until just a few years ago, our synagogue was blissfully unencumbered by this type of protocol. But then Pittsburgh's Tree of Life massacre happened in 2018 and the hostage taking this past January at Congregation Beth Israel in Coleyville, Texas. In fact, the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) reports an all time high of antisemitic incidents in the United States in 2021, with 2717 reported cases of assault, harassment, and vandalism. Along with other U.S. synagogues, Temple Beth Sholom has taken this increase very seriously. Our Security Committee, led by Dr. Larry Hurwitz and Jose Benrey, has consistently provided us with up-to-date recommendations in consultation with the Jewish Federation's Security team. Thanks to their steady and thoughtful leadership, we have increased our security measures, and are now protected by two armed guards and an un-armed guard daily.

As you are aware, these security measures are costly and have required us to add a security fee to our Temple membership, in addition to grants we have received from various agencies and the government. In an article in the Wall Street Journal in May, entitled "My Synagogue's 'Anti-Semitism Tax'", Howard Husock, who is a member of his synagogue's Board of Trustees, comments: "More than 5% of our budget is now devoted to security to protect the congregation. That's more than $150,000 a year to prevent tragedies like the deadly attacks...on other synagogues. We would all rather be investing this money in education and scholarships, but the needs of the moment require us to protect ourselves."

Many of you will be returning to Temple Beth Sholom for the first time in a long while these High Holy Days. We cannot wait to greet you and celebrate with you! Please know that our increased security will require your government issued ID and your QR code (see page 17). Your bags will be checked and you may be scanned by a metal detector. Unfortunately, we no longer look much different than a synagogue in Europe. Please know that these measures will take some extra time so be patient with us.

Every single day our security team keeps our staff and the children at our Innovative School and jLAB, and congregants who are worshiping, safe from the threats in our world today. Each time they check my bag, I am grateful to them for putting their lives on the line to protect us. Here are their names so that you, too, may thank them when you see them: (photos appear in this order)

Jerry Gabriel: Post Commander

Eric Wilson: Security

Daniel Petit-Frere: Security

Hayle Yomevartz

Rudolph "Rudy" Wilson: Supervisor

Like Jews around the world, we will be undeterred by those who wish to intimidate us. We will show up with pride and gratitude that we are able to gather, rejoice and celebrate together in safety, thanks to our security team and committee. May we one day, soon, be able to return to a time when we are unencumbered by threats. In the meantime, we are grateful to all who serve to protect us. After two years of not being able to gather in person on the High Holy Days, may our time together be even more meaningful and uplifting as we celebrate our past, present and future; Kadima - Moving Forward Together.

The Return

Hineh mah tov umah na'im shevet achim gam yachad. (Psalm 133:1)

Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for people to dwell together in unity.

Indeed, how good. How incredible, in fact. It's about time.

Later this month we will gather, finally in person, to celebrate the High Holy Days together for the first time since 2019. Though it feels like we are living in a very different world in many ways, we will be coming together in our familiar, beautiful sanctuary, full of light, full of color, and full of faces familiar and new.

I, for one, cannot wait.

Our offerings for the High Holy Days are vast, and designed to provide different ways to nourish your Jewish souls and connect you to each other. Some of the services and programs will be familiar to you, and some might feel new. I hope you take full advantage of what the clergy has planned for us, and that you take the time afterwards to reflect and let us know what you thought. We love your feedback.

One of the things that will look a little different this vear is our way of handling honors during the larger services. Pre-Covid we always tried to provide as many opportunities as possible for you, our active members and supporters, to ascend the Bimah, to open the Ark with us, or carry a Torah, or have an Aliyah. We spent countless hours as leaders with the indefatigable Dr. Bobbi Ossip at the helm, carefully going through lists, trying to be as inclusive and fair as possible, and attempting to ensure that people felt how special and important we believe they are. Though all of these sentiments remain true, and the hours are still being spent deliberating and planning, we do not feel we can responsibly host dozens of people in close quarters this year up on the Bimah. Too much traffic back and forth, up and down, creates extra risk and lengthens the service. For now, we have decided that we will handle honors by assigning representatives to certain groups, and by asking other people involved to stand in their seats. We will also take advantage of the stunning LCD screens that have been installed on the Bimah to show pictures and list names when feasible and appropriate. This is a process, and we are experimenting. If it doesn't work well, we will go back to the drawing board next year.

In terms of Covid protocols, at the time of writing this article we haven't yet finalized them, but we expect to be mask-optional, and we are working on ideas to create 'safer' spaces for those that are immunocompromised or seeking more protection. We do ask of you all though that - if you are feeling ill for any reason, please stay home and enjoy our services through our myriad streaming platforms. Above all, we are a community and we care for one other.

Chazak Chazak v'nitchazeik. May we go from strength to strength and may we, our beautiful Temple Community, be strengthened.

One of the seminal texts we read at the High Holy Days involves the Akeidah, the binding of Isaac. Abraham is told by G-d to take his son Isaac up Mount Horeb and sacrifice him. The story ends with G-d stopping Abraham at the last moment, and instead providing a ram for the sacrifice. This lends itself to the symbolism of using a ram's horn as a shofar, which we use throughout the High Holy Day season.

For a patriarch, Abraham was a pretty terrible father. Not just because he was willing to kill his son without much consideration after G-d told him to, though that would be bad enough on its own. On their way up the mountain, Isaac kept asking his father questions, suspecting that something was amiss, but Abraham kept quiet, not saying anything. Previously, Abraham had sent away his other son, Ishmael, in order to avoid conflict in the home. Abraham likely thought that he was protecting his children. But by not communicating with his children, he actually increased their anxiety and prevented them from learning how to confront challenges.

Ishmael was sent away with his mother, Hagar (Abraham's concubine), because Sarah (Abraham's wife) was jealous of their presence. Abraham intended to prevent the conflict between the women from impacting the relationship between his two children. However, what resulted was a strained dynamic and brothers who did not speak to one another until they had to come together to bury their father many years later. By avoiding a complicated situation, Isaac never worked through the underlying animosity he held toward Ishmael, which stemmed from his loyalty to his mother and had nothing to do with a sibling relationship that might have otherwise developed into a nurturing, supportive touch point in Isaac's life.

Abraham's lack of communication with Isaac also negatively impacted their own parent-child relationship. There is no evidence in the Torah that Isaac spoke with Abraham again after the Akeidah - and who could blame him? There are indications through the text and in Midrash that Isaac was never close with Abraham, and that after the death of his mother, Isaac turned entirely inward until he was introduced to Rebecca, who would become his wife. When he and Rebecca became the parents of twin boys, neither parent worked toward creating a loving and harmonious home environment; on the contrary, they each supported their respective favorite child in his pursuits, which resulted in another generation of dysfunctional sibling interactions. Isaac was entirely unprepared to navigate the relationship between his own children, due in part to the sibling experience that was taken away from him.

We often look to the Torah to learn from the examples of our historical Jewish figures. In the case of Abraham, it might be most valuable to learn lessons of what not to do with regard to parenting.

We certainly have good intentions when we try to keep our children from knowing about bad things in the world, as we do not want to burden them with adult problems. In some cases, this might be the right approach. But when we always keep our kids from experiencing anything negative, they do not gain the skills to work through these things when they encounter them. I know we want our kids to be happy. But how can they truly know what happiness feels like if they never experience unhappiness?

Likewise, ignoring a problem does not make it go away; in fact, it generally only exacerbates the problem as it simmers beneath the surface. Sending Hagar and Ishmael away did not banish their existence, just their immediate presence. This act did not dissolve Sarah's jealousy. In fact, it may have added a layer of anxiety to Sarah's life, as she continually wondered if Hagar and Ishmael would return unannounced. The anger and resentment that Hagar and Sarah felt toward each other seeped down to their sons, even if these feelings were not overtly expressed to them. Years later, that resentment sullied the ability for Ishmael and Isaac to pay respects to their father upon his death. To our knowledge, the brothers never had contact again, severing a family relationship. This caused ripple effects for literally thousands of years, as there is still strife between the respective religious groups that have descended from Ishmael and Isaac.

As parents, it is our job not to shield children from negativity in the world, but rather to teach them how to cope with the less-than-ideal. Most of getting through life successfully involves the ability to problem solve. If our children are protected from problems, how can they ever learn to solve them? This might make us uncomfortable as we watch our children struggle, but we can guide them to figure things out so that they gain the skills to eventually do this on their own. Our Jewish stories and values can be a great asset in this process. In doing this, we can raise a generation of people who are strong and resilient, and who move our world forward in a positive, productive way.

Innovative School

Stacy Penson Director of Elementary Level

The Innovative School has partnered with The Learner-Centered Collaborative since our elementary level's inception. The Learner Centered Collaborative partners with educators to define whole-learner outcomes, design meaningful learning experiences, and create the enabling conditions for their unique journey to inclusive and equitable learner-centered education.

Learner-Centered Collaborative is a non-profit that emerged from decades of experience in education. They are guided by the persistent truth that a learner-centered approach is the foundation for a successful, thriving learning community. Recognizing the complexity of change, driven by what's best for learners, and informed by research and practice, they have worked closely with our school to find a new way forward.

This summer, the Learner-Centered Collaborative invited our school to present at the annual Partner Forum. They wanted to highlight our school as an example of a high level learner-centered model. Ms. Miriam Cruz, our Elementary Studio Educator, and I presented real world examples of the work we do everyday at the Innovative School. We shared stories, examples, tips, and lessons learned from our work toward more learner-centered models of education. Participants viewed a day in the life at the Innovative School as we walked educators from around the globe through what learner-centered assessment and authentic, project-based learning experiences look like at the Innovative School.

Dr. Katie Martin is one of the Chief Impact Officers of the Learner-Centered Collaborative. She recently published her second book, Evolving Education. This summer, our elementary level educators participated in a Book Club to unpack and discuss the book. Evolving Education offers a look into how educators can harness new technologies, learning sciences, and pedagogy that center learners and learning. She states, "if we truly want to develop knowledge, habits, and skills in students, we have to know them, love them, and help them see the full beauty of who they are and what they can become." Together as a learning community, we discussed our aspirations for learners, how we can create the most impactful learning experiences and how we can create the enabling conditions to shift to a learner-centered paradigm.

The learner-centered approach aligns perfectly with our Reggio Emilia approach to learning. Our approaches are constructed to bridge the gap between academic content, skill and concept learning with meaningful applications that make the pursuit of knowledge relevant in the real world. Our learners become co-constructors of their learning and this is a learning disposition that will be nurtured in our learners for a life-time. Our goal is for our children to love learning. Through ongoing observation and assessment of the learning process, our educators mindfully plan curriculum. Learning standards and goals undergird these experiences and processes. Our learner-centered curriculum is anchored in meaningful experiences, providing learning opportunities that promote collaboration, critical thinking, and inquiry. We believe that academic growth rests upon a positive foundation of social and emotional development. Classroom community is developed and learners authentically witness the value of multiple perspectives. Learning how to live and become a morally conscious member of a community is a central concept for our children.

If you would like to learn more about what we are doing to align education with our present and future world and disrupt the status quo of the current system, which is still designed for an Industrial Age that no longer exists, please reach out to me at stacy@theinnovativeschool.org.

My Best Always,

Stacy

Welcoming Our Rabbinic Intern

Ada Luisa Sinacor Rabbinic Intern

Balaam—a foreign prophet—stood in the desert, gazing out at the encamped Israelite tribes. In the moment he opened his mouth to curse the people—just as Balak, the Moabite king, had instructed him—the spirit of G-d descended upon him, and instead, he spoke these words of blessing

Mah tovu ohalekha Ya'akov, Mishkenotekha Yisrael!

How lovely are your tents, Jacob, Your sanctuaries, Israel! (Numbers 24: 5)

I find it curious that now, this blessing—originally proclaimed by a non-Jew in the guise of a curse— is typically recited each time a Jew enters a place of worship. In fact, (thanks in part to Danny Maseng's catchy tune) it is probably one of our most well-known pieces of liturgy today.

This phrase as prayer originated in the late Middle Ages— at least 10 centuries after this biblical verse was first written—when the rabbis of the time combined it with several other verses from Psalms. This amalgamated prayer, if you will, is an interesting combination of "I" statement phrases (e.g. I enter Your house, I love Your dwelling place, I prostrate myself before You) and Balaam's blessing (e.g. How lovely are Your tents). This blessing drastically differs in its language (being largely in the first-person singular, I), as compared to our communal blessings that are usually recited in the first-person plural (e.g. V'imeru, And we say). It is as if, our rabbis suggest, each time we enter a sanctuary, we place ourselves apart, on the outside of the community, looking in. We ourselves are the stranger, offering blessing, before coming together as a minyan.

Rashi, our 12th century commentator, gives an alternate translation to the word mishkan in this Torah verse (translated above as sanctuary). He suggests that the word can also mean "pledge." He says that following the destruction of the Second Temple in Jerusalem that the building of synagogues and batei midrash (houses of study) was a way of maintaining our brit, our covenant, with G-d. That brit, that relationship, is foundational to who we are as individuals and as communities, in that it dictates how we interact with all the peoples of the world, with each other and with G-d. In a sense, according to Rashi, Balaam is both praising our sacred Jewish spaces, and our covenantal relationships with one another.

I am, as of yet, a stranger to this community. I am from Montreal, Canada, and I live in New York and will join your sanctuary as your Rabbinic Intern (both in person and via Zoom) this month. During this coming year, I'm excited to learn from and with you in the sacred space that is Temple Beth Sholom. From Mitzvah Day through Adult Education and the Teen Social Justice League, I relish the opportunity to be part of your efforts toward Tzedek and Tikkun Olam, all the while building meaningful relationships.

It is with that sentiment, of an outsider being invited into your sacred space, that I offer this blessing of Balaam. For those I have already met, thank you for your kind words of welcome. For those I have yet to meet, please reach out. I am looking forward to meeting you all in person come Fall.

Chodesh Tov,

Ada Luisa Sinacore

Social Justice

Jeff Agron
Social Justice Director

I am pleased to be your new director of social justice programs and staff leader of the Social Justice Network (SJN). I have felt very welcome at Temple Beth Sholom in my short time here. I would like to thank my predecessor Rachel Lilenbaum for helping with my transition into the position.

By way of introduction, I am 61 years old and have lived almost my entire life in the Miami area, having grown up in North Miami, graduating from North Miami Senior High and the University of Miami Law School, and residing in South Miami/Pinecrest for over 35 years. I am married, have three adult daughters and, as of June 28, one precious granddaughter. In my career, I have been an attorney, synagogue religious school director, religious school teacher, temple board member, Jewish meditation teacher, Jewish spiritual director, and Jewish non-profit administrator. For the past four years, I have been involved with the Religious Action Center of Reform Judaism (the "RAC"). I currently serve on the RAC-FL leadership team and the URJ Commission on Social Action. I am also a past URJ North America Board member and lifelong Camp Coleman cheerleader (and former camper).

Through my involvement with RAC-FL, I have worked with the Temple Beth Sholom clergy and SJN lay leaders and feel I know our community well. I have been impressed with Temple Beth Sholom's strong commitment to social justice. I am excited for the upcoming year and all that the SJN has to offer.

A brief preview of what is coming up this year with the SJN:

- We are currently engaged with the RAC in their Every Voice Every Vote civic engagement campaign, leading up to the general election in November. If you would like to be involved, please contact Myra Spindel, myraspindel@gmail.com.
- After the election, the SJN will focus on climate change and climate justice. More details will be forthcoming.
- Mitzvah Day and Soup Contest are February 26, 2023.
- · Our direct service projects will start again in the Fall.

I am looking forward to a great year working with our SJN co-chairs, Rachel Unger and Andrea Wagner. If you are interested in becoming involved, please reach out to me at jagron@tbsmb.org, Rachel at ungerita@yahoo.com, or Andrea at wags3671@gmail.com.

Please join the Gun Violence Prevention Task Force on Tuesday, September 13 at 7:00 pm for our kick-off meeting for the new year. We will have training on the BeSMART program, which is designed to help parents and adults normalize conversations about gun safety and take responsible actions that can prevent child gun deaths and injuries. Check the website for more details.

DESCRIPTION OF STUDY OPPORTUNITIES

B'tzalem Elohim: What does G-d really look like?

Rabbinic Intern, Luisa Sinacore will teach: There is much debate around how we gender G-d: how we might stay true to traditional understandings of G-d while also building inclusive and ethical Jewish spaces today? In this Torah study, we will take a moment to read through our creation narratives—those which proclaim how each of us were made B'tzalem Elohim, in the "Image of G-d"— and ask the question: What does G-d really look like? How might each of us find our own image of G-d in our ever-changing sex and gender landscape?

Join Rabbi Pomerantz in this virtual Torah study as we reflect on Yom Kippur's powerful Torah reading to "choose life" (Deuteronomy 30:19) and what that means in the context of reproductive choice. We will explore texts from the Torah to contemporary authors to gain understanding of Judaism's understanding of when life begins and the primacy of a mother's needs over an unborn fetus.

Yom Kippur Afternoon, Virtual Torah Study, 1:45 pm

"No matter where life takes you, you will always find a home at Temple Beth Sholom."

When Jonathan and I made the pilgrimage with Molly (then two years old) and Zoe (then 10 months) from New York to Miami in 2005, we had very little connection to South Florida. Being a third generation Brooklynite provided deep roots that were not easily transplanted, but with a desire to find a place where our young family could build a new community. Even before the moving trucks were packed, we researched a list of synagogues and Jewish pre-schools in the area. Jonathan and I both grew up in Conservative congregations, so we were initially looking for the same, but as we continued to explore, we were drawn to the warm embrace of Temple Beth Sholom.

I vividly remember meeting the amazing Francine Herold (z"l), head of the TBS Foundation School at the time, and immediately knew that this was where our family needed to be. No matter that we would have to drive from Surfside where we lived, battling the dreadful "flyover" construction traffic. Temple Beth Sholom would be the place where we learned what it means to "show up." We showed up at Tot Shabbat every Saturday for songs with Mark Baranek and story time with Miss Leslie (Harris). We showed up for services and school events, PTO meetings and Mitzvah Day. There have been family trips to Israel, B'not Mitzvah, Confirmations and lifecycle events, teen advocacy programs and too many Shabbat dinners to count.

For the past 17 years, our family's roots have grown firmly planted at our synagogue, bolstered by lifelong relationships and a true sense of belonging. Our gift to the Legacy Endowment at TBS was an opportunity for us to show up in a tangible and meaningful way; to be part of a future that promises no matter where life takes you, you will always find a home at Temple Beth Sholom.

- Karen Sepsenwol
